Our Link Building Strategy

Ranking on the first page of Google takes two things: relevance and trust.

Relevance = onsite work

We optimize the content, keywords, and code of your website. This gives users the information they need about your services/products and supports what is being said offsite.

Trust = offsite work

We create content about your industry and place it where other people can like, share, and click to route back to your website.

A website's trust is determined by the number of other websites that link back to a website. These links, called backlinks, are like a "vote of confidence" from one website to another. It's a signal to Google that other people can vouch for and recommend your services and products.

Link Diversification

We place active, clickable links in all the places people gather online (industry sites, blogs, business directories, etc.). These links direct users back to your website. The more links you have, and the more relevant and trusted they are, the more you will be, too.

5 LINK DIVERSIFICATION TYPES

Link Location

We don't focus solely on high profile websites. We ensure you have links from a variety of relevant sources.

Link Type

To make your link portfolio natural and organic, we supply an appropriately balanced mix of do-follow and no-follow links.

Link Quality

A small business doesn't need hundreds of links to gain trust, and too many links can look suspicious and unnatural to Google.

Content Type

We create different kinds of content to accompany your links, including blog posts, articles, article engagement, infographics, and other web content.

Link Scheduling

Artificial links are easy to spot because they tend to post online all at once or in a predictable pattern. Organic links, on the other hand, tend to post randomly at any time.

Link Quality

We create backlinks that appear natural, as if a small business owner were manually creating their own.

The “quality” of a link is subjective and varies greatly from one SEO expert to another. Because Google doesn't share their algorithm with anyone, it opens the door to a wide variety of opinions on what effective SEO is. Many of those are just that, opinions.

Links relevant to our clients' services and products are far more impactful than links from a website with high domain authority.

We performed a case study that targeted higher domain authority sites and the performance was nearly identical to sites with low domain authority. Focusing on sites with high domain authority took significantly more effort and doubled the price of our SEO.

This is what our method is all about; using diverse link building efforts to get our clients the best results for the best price. It doesn't matter what our company thinks good SEO is, or what the internet at large thinks good SEO is – Google is the judge and our track record indicates they like our link building strategy.

In fact, they like it so much that 86% of our clients reach the first page of Google within 6 months.
